Winner for October

"My wife, Sherry, named this photo, "Bare Limbs Spider Web Across a Winter's Sky." Looking up into our front yard tree this past winter, I was thinking that it needed a good pruning. But then I saw the whole picture – bare tree limbs silhouetted against a deep blue sky with huge white clouds. Mother Nature at work, and I got to enjoy the view! I snapped a photo, and now you can enjoy it, too!"

— Jack Rich Jr., Heavy Duty Truck Operator, Hyperion Plant, Public Works

John's comments: Awesome picture and perfect title! The purity yet randomness of nature has a way of becoming wonderful art. Good eye, and thanks for sharing this with us!

Winner for October

"These are from Disney's California Adventure, taken way back in August 2003."

— James Howlett, Harbor

John's comments: "I love this picture! It's actually a reflection of the Ferris wheel, which gives a very surreal look and feel. Nice work, James!"

Winner for October

"The location is Moraine Lake in the Canadian Rockies. I took this in the summer of 2005."

— Brian Doherty, Transportation

John's comments: John's comments: The way you've positioned this beautifully brilliant lake takes the eye on a wonderful journey to the mountains and surrounding trees. Nature framed this shot perfectly. Nice work, Brian!

Winner for October

"The picture was taken off the coast of a small island in Cambodia, close to Kampong Saom (Sihanoukville). While in Cambodia, I spent a lot of time doing volunteer work in the country's capital city, Phnom Penh."

— Neil Rivas

John's comments: I like this photo because it's a very natural shot, showing the crudeness and ingenuity of these fishermen. From the contraption on the bow to the homemade looking trolling engine, it's a definite National Geographic moment. Thanks, Neil!

William Flowers, Airports; Rita Moen, wife of Brian Moen, Fleet Services, General Services; Yin Wong, General Services; Cecille Consebido, Sanitation, Public Works; Ron Angst, DWP; Janelle Adeloga Carpena, DWP; Robert Garcia
