Celebrating A Great Project

Success of Sanitation's TIRE project is celebrated at luncheon.

Story and photos by Tanya R. Edwards, Club Counselor

A celebratory luncheon was held Oct. 12 for Sanitation employees involved in the division's TIRE project, by the project's contractors, GeoEnvironment Technologies.

Sanitation broke ground April 5, 2007, for the nation's first project to produce green energy from a renewable bio-resource using deep well injection.

Renewable Energy project (T.I.R.E.), uses an existing oil-industry technology to convert biosolids to green energy. It injects biosolids in depleted oil and gas reservoirs more than a mile underground near the City's Terminal Island Plant. There, the earth's high internal temperatures and pressures will form methane gas – much like oil reserves formed from prehistoric creatures.

The project underwent field testing, as the plant is now in operation.
