"Art Imitating (Automobile) Art – that's what came to my mind as I was strolling over the grounds at the Gene Autry Museum today and observed an art class that was busy at work with its paint brushes and doing a great job! Perhaps you're as intrigued with the scene as I was. It also goes to show that classics live forever."

– Yves Didier, Airport Police

John's comment: Yes Yves, classics live forever. Nice shot!

"My daughter, Sophie ... a rainy April day ... and a low low tide at Pismo Beach."

– Mike Aubin, Airports

John's comment: I love this picture. Her expression is priceless, and the bucket sitting there on the sand juxtaposed with the water and pier is perfect. Thanks, Mike!

"I was on a month-long Asian vacation, and one of the places I went was Panglao Island, Bohol, Philippines. The wharf is in a property called Flushing Meadows Resort. All the rooms were named after famous international players. One of the boats can be hired to go on an island 30 minutes away where dolphins, stingrays and turtles abound. A seafood lunch, some of which we had the privilege of catching ourselves, was also included. The broiled stingray was awesome with lemon."

– Gina Enrile-Caguiat, Public Works/Engineering, Retired

John's comment: I wish I were there, right at the end of this dock! Thanks, Gina, for a relaxing Picture Perfect!

"Shiny objects like this building are difficult to photograph without the high-intensity burns. I benefited from the cloud cover that dropped the ambient light."

– Harold Johnson, Airports

John's comment: Harold, you are so right, it is extremely difficult to capture shiny objects and buildings. But you succeeded on this one. Good job!
